I saw the term 'Belle' mentioned in a video by one of the top downhill skiers and one of the guys I talked to about the sport said that she is the reason that the move came to be called the 'Belle' Slope. What is that about? A: Because the trick is named after Belle from Beauty and the Beast. From Wikipedia: Belle's "Belle" Slope is a type of 'bottomless' trick, in which the skier falls into a half-pipe, continues falling, and then 'Belle' flies out of the pipe at the end of the trick. Thousands of people gathered in the streets of Belfast on Sunday for a rally against the 'disastrous' introduction of same-sex marriage in Northern Ireland. The North is the only part of the UK to allow same-sex couples to get civil partnerships. The first ceremonies were held in January and the issue is now due to be debated at Stormont, the devolved assembly, on Tuesday. Organisers claimed the demonstration was "absolutely massive". They said about 10,000 people attended the rally, and another 10,000 turned out for a separate march.

Belfast Telegraph[Results of Nd-YAG laser iridotomy in patients with severe angle-closure glaucoma]. As iridotomy is an accepted treatment for angle-closure glaucoma, in this study we attempted to determine the efficacy of the laser in vitrodilation of the anterior chamber angle. Prior to laser treatment, we examined, by ultrasound, the angle-widths of 32 consecutive patients with an IOP of more than 30 mmHg and with a range from 20 to 30 degrees. We found a mean angle-width of 1.24 mm +/- 0.36. After laser treatment of each eye we examined the angle-width again. We used the same ultrasound method to examine the angle-width and found the mean angle-width to be 3.28 +/- 0.42. This is a statistically significant increase in angle-width. For five patients the laser iridotomy was combined with cataract surgery. An IOP-lowering medication was not necessary in any case. Moritz Sommerfeld Moritz Sommerfeld (82157476af
